

ARTS INTEGRATION: THE ARTS AND RESTORATIVE JUSTICE

The Florida Alliance for Arts Education has joined forces with the Duval County Public Schools, Cathedral Arts, Yellow House, and the Americans for the Arts to present an exciting day of professional development designed to increase your capacity to deliver high-quality instruction. Experts in arts integration and restorative strategies will share best practices and how they are woven into the fabric of school and community life. Especially designed for non-arts classroom teachers!

FEATURED SPEAKER

Hope McMath

Yellow House

Hope opened Yellow House, an organization that promotes art as a catalyst for personal and collective growth by displaying thought-provoking exhibitions, hosting public events, and promoting community dialogue. It is a hub for educational outreach and collaborations among artists, writers, organizations, and communities.

Hope has been recognized with the OneJax Humanitarian Award (2016), the Jacksonville University Frances Kinne Alumni of Distinction Community Service Award (2017), the Educational Service Award from the Atlantic Institute (2017) and was recognized with various national and regional awards for arts education during her career as a museum educator.

CLOSING SPEAKER FROM AMERICANS FOR THE ARTS

In a society struggling to find equity and social justice, Americans believe the arts improve the quality of our communities. How do we know? We asked. Our second national survey about the arts found that Americans believe more strongly than ever that the arts promote personal well-being, help us understand other cultures in our community, are essential to a well-rounded K-12 education, and that government has an important role in funding the arts.
